

Material footprints measure the demand for extracted materials used by households, governments, and businesses. They are smaller in low-income countries than in richer countries, which consume more.

Material footprint, 2010 (metric tons per capita)

